Forward

The Council of State Governments has been involved with interstate compacts for many years. This document updates a 1983 publication. It lists compacts by subject and by state, provides a brief description about the compact, statutory citations from 1983-1994, and the year states joined the compact. This edition also includes the agency and titles of compact administrators when this information was provided by the states. When a compact creates an interstate agency or other body, we have attempted to provide the agency name, address, telephone and FAX number. When available, we also provided the names of agency staff and some officers. Generally, we did not list officers because they change frequently.

Readers will also notice some compact titles contain words in parenthesis. This indicates the state statutes or their indexes listed derivatives of one title. Some compacts are even identified by two titles, one of which is in parenthesis. This indicates a generic name for the compact plus the name of the compact as listed by the state or the code index. There are two reasons for this. First, the enabling legislation containing a compact may not have had the same title as the compact. Second, code publishers may have substituted an abbreviated or different title to satisfy their indexing requirements. In cases where there is only partial information (e.g., title and citations, but no description) we provided as much information as we could get during the course of our research.

The index of dormant or defunct compacts has been moved to the end of the book. We qualified these compacts as "may be dormant or defunct" because of the large number of compacts which are still on the books and because the states did not indicate or confirm such compacts were dormant or defunct.

Finally, this edition does not update citations for Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, or the trust territories. Future editions will include their data.

The author thanks the state officials who verified the data in this report and the following people for their help in the initial phase of compiling the data: Jeffrey Hunter, Julie Fishman and Roger Wilson.

Ogdensburg Bridge and Port Authority Compact

In 1950 the State of New York created the Ogdensburg Bridge Authority to handle certain transportation systems relative to the St. Lawrence River at Ogdensburg, New York. In the same year comparable action was taken by the U.S. government. In 1952 Canada also enacted legislation validating and incorporating the Ogdensburg Bridge Authority. Subsequent amendments were adopted by Canada in 1956 and 1958, and by New York in 1960, adding port authority and other related functions. The responsibility for administration and operations is now vested in the Ogdensburg Bridge and Port Authority. This agreement thus constitutes a unique mechanism representing the State of New York, the Canadian government, and the government of the United States as equal partners.

Interstate Compacts and Agencies

Portsmouth-Kittery Bridge Compact

Established an authority to build an interstate bridge. The compact includes bonding authority. In 1985 Congress passed P.L. 99-190 to enable the Authority to transfer ownership of the approach roadways to the bridge and the overpasses to Maine and New Hampshire. Ownership of bordering real estate located in New Hampshire was also transferred to New Hampshire. The roadways became public highways, and (by administrative action) are in the Federal Aid system, thus qualifying for matching funds for capital improvement projects. The bridge itself is retained by the Bridge Authority, and also qualifies for Federal Aid in the form of matching funds. An amendment to the Compact (Article IV) transfers Authority employees to the Maine Department of Transportation and New Hampshire Department of Public Works and Highways.

(Interstate) Compact on (the) Placement of Children

A legal and administrative means to permit child placement activities to be pursued throughout the country in much the same way, and with the same safeguards and services, as though they were being conducted in a single state. The compact requires notice and proof of the suitability of a placement before it is made; allocates specific legal and administrative responsibilities during the continuance of an interstate placement; provides a basis for enforcement of rights; and authorizes joint actions in all party states to improve operations and services. All U.S. jurisdictions and Canadian provinces are eligible. Consent of Congress is not required until a Canadian province seeks joinder.

Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal

Low-level radioactive waste consists of waste items which contain small amounts of radioactivity. Nuclear power plants, hospitals, industry and research facilities generate low-level radioactive waste.

Congress passed the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act in 1980 to encourage the states to enter into compacts as a means of dealing with low-level radioactive waste disposal. These were followed by congressional amendments in 1985 to further the process.

The state compacts are listed below. They require congressional consent. Generally, the compacts establish a host state, siting authority, licensing authority, developer/operator, and commission. These components consist of federal, state and private sector participants.

Appalachian States Low-Level Radioactive Waste Compact

Pennsylvania is the host state. A site had not been chosen as of February 1995. The state plans to identify, approve and license a site by the end of 1998. Under this scenario, the facility would become operational in 1999.

Western Interstate Nuclear Compact

This compact originally established a board to assist member states in dealing with nuclear energy. In 1977 three interstate agencies (Western Interstate Nuclear Board--WINB; Western Governors' Regional Energy Policy Office --WGREPO; and Federation of Rocky Mountain States--FRMS) integrated into a unified energy resources policy office. It was named the Western Interstate Energy Board (WIEB). The board was expanded to include developments in regulation of all energy fields. Emphasis is placed on state federal relations and the review and monitoring of federal and state energy policies.

States and Indian Gaming

The federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act of 1988 (IGRA) permits Indian tribes in any state to conduct gaming on Indian land that the state permits for non-Indians. Federal law defines gaming in three classes, Class

I, II and III. Class I, "social games" are under the exclusive jurisdiction of Indian tribes. The federal law directs states to negotiate compacts with the Indian tribes before Class II and III gaming can begin. Class II gaming consists of bingo, keno, pull tabs, punchboards, and nonbanking card games. Class III includes casino games like roulette, craps and baccarat.

Although technically not interstate, it is reported that states and tribes have entered into 50 compacts in at least nine states. These include California, Connecticut, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin. A few citations are listed in this publication under "other governmental" in the state index section. However, for more information, readers should contact state gaming officials direct.

INSURANCE

Beginning in 1990, the National Conference of Insurance Legislators (NCOIL) and the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) Midwest Zone developed the Interstate Insurance Receivership Compact. The purpose of the compact is to develop more uniform and coordinated approaches to dealing with insolvent insurance companies, and particularly multistate insurers. The compact establishes a commission to oversee and monitor insurer receiverships. The commissioners would be appointed by member each state, under a method determined by each state. All states are eligible to join the compact. It becomes effective when two states enact it into law. It does not reference congressional consent.

As of February, 1995, bills containing the compact have been introduced in Indiana, Nebraska, New Hampshire and Texas.

Nonresident Violator Compact

The Council of State Governments

Assures nonresident motorists receiving citations for minor traffic violations in a party state the same treatment that would be accorded to resident motorists. Procedures under the compact are reasonable and provide due process protection, but they also make it difficult for the person who violates law to escape from the consequences. The compact is also designed to enhance law enforcement service and deterrence time spent on the highways. This compact was developed through a Council of State Governments project in cooperation with the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, the National Committee on Uniform Traffic Laws and Ordinances, and the U.S. Department of Transportation. For full text and description, see CSG's 1978 Suggested State Legislation. Consent of Congress is not required, although implicit consent probably flows from the Federal Highway Safety Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 635).

Vehicle Equipment Safety Compact

The Vehicle Equipment Safety Compact is designed to expedite the development and adoption of uniform standards for improving automotive safety equipment.

Interstate Compacts and Agencies

According to the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators (AAMVA), the compact was originally administered by the Vehicle Equipment Safety Commission. As of 1994, this commission was not operating. The AAMVA is seeking to re-establish the commission, and says the standards developed as a result of the compact are still being used. The compact is open to all states.

International Registration Plan

A registration reciprocity compact among states of to United States and provinces of Canada providing for payment of license fees on the basis of fleet miles operated in various jurisdictions. Even though license fees are paid to the various jurisdictions, only one license plate and one cab card is issued for each fleet vehicle when registered under the plan. A fleet vehicle is known as an "apportionable" vehicle and, so far as registration is concerned, may be operated both interstate and intrastate. The plan is a product of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators. For further information, see CSG's 1978 Suggested State Legislation.

PUBLIC SAFETY

Civil Defense

Civil Defense and Disaster Compact

During the late 1940s and early 1950s, virtually all states and other jurisdictions of the U.S. enacted legislation modeled on the Interstate Civil Defense and Disaster Compact, or variants thereof. Congressional consent was granted pursuant to Title II, Section 201(g) of the Civil Defense Act of 1950 [64 Stat. 1245]. In effect, the compact authorized entry into supplementary bilateral or multilateral agreements to establish a basic legal framework for mutual defense aid and disaster assistance. Legal citations to those early ratifications are extremely difficult to compile, even though many remain valid. A revised version appeared as the Example State Disaster Act of 1972. Section 10 of that act revalidates the Civil Defense and Disaster Compact, thus making it available in time of need. Other sections of the act carry the most recent procedures for state-federal cooperation in disaster relief, including reference to new provisions authorized by the Disaster Relief Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-288). That congressional act contained a number of new features and programs intended to improve capabilities of the federal, state, and local governments to cope with disasters and to respond without delay to the needs of communities, individuals, and families victimized by disaster.

The following states were originally reported to have enacted the Example State Disaster Act of 1972: Arkansas, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia. For further information, see CSG's 1973 Suggested State Legislation (pp. 104-128); also see the Council's 1975 report containing suggested amendments authorizing enhanced state programs consonant with P.L. 93-288.

In 1993 the Southern Governors Association (SGA) drafted the Southern Regional Emergency Management Compact. Article 1 says "mutual assistance in this compact may include the use of the state(s) National Guard forces, in accordance with the National Guard Mutual Assistance Compact or by mutual agreement between the states." Governors in 17 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands signed the compact on August 17, 1993.

The SGA compact was endorsed by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), and in fact, later that year FEMA attempted to get other states outside the South to adopt a similar compact. It is not known whether FEMA succeeded.

Several states have also enacted emergency management compacts. The SGA compact and the emergency management compacts are listed in this document after the civil defense compact(s) below.

Mutual/Military Aid

Mutual/Military Aid Compact

Provides for mutual military aid in emergency, fresh pursuit of saboteurs or enemy forces, and legal protection of military members while engaged outside their home state. This compact is not nationwide in scope.

In addition to the legal citations listed below, in 1950 the governors of New York and New Jersey signed mutual aid agreements. It appears this agreement was modified in 1963 to enable at least New Jersey to join with other states under the same basic agreement.

In 1957, Massachusetts enacted two military aid com-pacts, one applying solely to the New England states and another to Massachusetts and New York.

Emergency Management

A series of disasters, including earthquakes, hurricanes Andrew and Hugo, and flooding in the Midwest, refocused state efforts on emergency planning in the early 1990s.

The fact that some existing compacts related primarily to civil defense and National Guard mobility, and not necessarily to other state emergency personnel, and questions about licensing and liability contributed to the effort.

Thus, in addition to the SGA and FEMA compacts mentioned previously, this has led to several states adopting new or modifying existing language concerning mutual aid. Some of these are listed below. Additional information can be found under Government Mutual Aid Agreements, in CSG's 1994 Suggested State Legislation. Readers can also check the language of each state to provide more details.

Earthquake

Interstate Earthquake Emergency Compact

The compact's purpose is to provide mutual aid among the states in meeting emergencies or disasters caused by earthquakes or other seismic disturbance. The compact directs the party states to develop earthquake relief plans and programs; inventory materials and equipment that would be available for relief efforts; maintain a databank of regional resources that might be needed and share the data with other party states. It also addresses reciprocal licensing authorization for people rendering aid, immunity from liability, compensation, reimbursement and evacuation. Any state is eligible to join the compact. The compact becomes effective when enacted into law by each state, provided two states have initially enacted it.

These include fire services, law enforcement, emergency medical, transportation, communications, public works and engineering, building inspection, medical services and search and rescue.

The governors of Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Puerto Rico, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, the Virgin Islands, Virginia and West Virginia signed the compact on August 17, 1993. TRANSPORTATION

High Speed/Rapid Rail

Several compacts have been adopted to encourage states to study the feasibility of high speed passenger rail service between major U.S. cities.

Interstate High Speed Intercity Rail Passenger Network Compact/Interstate High Speed Rail Compact

This compact was originally created to enable Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia to jointly conduct a feasibility study to establish high speed rail passenger service between the major cities in each state. Apparently, this compact was amended and the bylaws revised in 1982 and 1983. The revisions brought membership changes and a slightly new focus ... i.e., to encourage regional planning and development of high speed ground transportation between major cities in the Midwest. The compact is also referred to as the Interstate High Speed Rail Compact, Midwest High Speed Rail Compact, and High Speed Rail Compact. Current member states are listed below.

Interstate Rail Passenger Network Compact

Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee would agree to jointly study creating an interstate rail passenger network to connect major cities in the member states. This would continue Amtrak's work to evaluate a "western route" to include Chattanooga, Chicago, Evansville, Jacksonville, Macon, Nashville, and Waycross. The compact creates and Interstate Rail Passenger Advisory Council to conduct or oversee the study, and otherwise implement the compact. The council consists of three members from each state, one each appointed by the governor, Senate president, and House speaker. The compact becomes effective upon adoption by two participating states. It does not reference congressional consent.

Potomac Highlands Airport Authority

Created the Potomac Highlands Authority in 1976, to provide an institutional structure that allows local governments in Maryland and West Virginia to coordinate the provision of air transportation facilities and services on a regional basis.

The compact deals with the Cumberland Municipal Airport, which is owned by Cumberland, Maryland, operated by Allegany County, Maryland, but located in Mineral County, West Virginia. The compact remained dormant until 1990 when the governors of Maryland and West Virginia signed an Intergovernmental Agreement to activate the compact. This agreement changed the name of the Cumberland Municipal Airport to Cumberland Regional Airport, formally transferred airport operating authority from Allegany County to the Authority, appointed a Board of Directors for the Authority, and defined the amount of funding that would be expected from each state and their respective county participants.
